ADDR DAILY TRIBUNE STATE BOAT MAY 21 DESC

THE OUTRAGE ON MR. SUMNER.

From Our Special Correspondent. WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 22, 1856. The outrage upon Mr. Sumner is the engrossing topic of conversation. No assault could have been more brutal or more cowardly; but it must not be regarded as an occurrence which is to be rendered more rare simply by exposure and criticism. The state of things here and everywhere in the country Where Slavery and Freedom are to come into immediate conflict is to grow worse and not better. It is idle to suppose that improvement will come merely by reason of censure an event as occurred to-day. It is justified on the ground that no man should be plain-spoken on Slavery and its supporters, and that such speech should be suppressed by violence. This is the rule in the slaveholding district of the Union, and as the General Government is succumbing, or to speak more properly, has succumbed to the slave power, the rule of the Slave States, which is silence on the subject, is to be enforced here and everywhere. Northern men, in the quiet of their homes, will say this is too much to believe. Of course it is and they have disbelieved. But Kansas is telling the story of Slavery, and Washington now echoes it. It is absurd, therefore, to indulge in mere denunciation of even so monstrous an offense as the assailing of a Senator in his seat for words spoken in debate against the spread of Slavery, and belaboring him with a bludgeon whose blows might have caused instant death; for it is considered exemplary treatment of such an offense by the leaders of the Slavery-Extension movement. Doubtless, Mr. Toombe, who so complacently witnessed the affray, thought, "Well, this hastens the day when I shall call the roll of my playes on Bunker Hill." And Mr. Douglas. who either was was present, or came in before the tragedy was complete, no doubt, amiably felt that the process of subduing opposition to Slavery extension was being properly carried out on the

The thing of which this violence is merely the patural manifestation, is increasing in force in the nation every hour, and has been ever since the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill. To attempt to abate the expression simply by denouncing the examples of it, is futile. We shall have to go deeper and extirpate the cause. The slave power has taken this nation by the throat, and the hold must be broken or these svents will go on and multiply, and become more and more aggravated and humiliating, till the North is finally and totally subdued. floor of the Senate. Such is a fair inference from their appearance and expressions on the occasion.

SUMNER-CRAMPTON-CLAYTON. From Our Own Correspondent, WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 22, 1856.

Events of marked personal or public import, in connection with the existing state of things, are presented to attention almost every day. News fisabes over the wires from the Western frontier that Kansas is besieged-bayonets bristle, and civil war is imminent. To plead for it, is to be branded with treason by the parasites and pimps of power, er to be waylaid by armed bullies, who gloat over the destruction of human life, and glory in the shame of crime.

The premeditated assault on Mr. Sumner in the ball of the Senate, and almost in presence of its deliberations, is one of the most daring offenses yet perpetrated, and furnishes another evidence of the extremities to which sectional partisans are prepared to resort, in order to restrain the liberty of speech, and to strike down the spirit of opposition to their selfish schemes. It remains to be seen whether the Senate will resent this outrage upon its dignity and character, or quietly submit to allow the chamber to be made an arena for the exhibition of brutal passions and assaults. In my opinion, the affront will be pocketed, without an effort to wipe out its stigma. How long is this oppression to be borne in submisson ?

An effort is now making to induce Mr. Clayton to rise in the Senate and qualify his recent statement in regard to Mr. Crampton, that the latter had made a mistake instead of a misrepresentation. It is yet undecided whether be will take this course, though his friends are decidedly averse to it under the circumstances, and without some satisfactory demonstration or the part of Mr. Crampton.

At length Lord Clarendon's answer to our demand, and Mr. Crampton's explanation to him, are both before the public. They sustain literally all the important revelations in this correspondence enlarging the sphere of information only by the extent of the additional words. The facts are precisely as they were stated. Both these papers e well executed. The first is most remarkable for its moderated tone, and contrasts to advantage with preceding dispatches from the same source The emphatic and reiterated disavowal on behal of the British Government of a purpose to violate our laws, or offend our sovereign rights, leaves but one recourse to the Administration, and that is to accept it in good faith and frankness.

Mr. Crampton's explanation is less successful, and rests entirely, so far as the material facts are concerned, upon an impeachment of the testimony on the recruitment trials, with some reproach to the whole judicial proceedings. This is but a re-petition of what Lord Clarendon had previously said, and, of course, upon information derived from Mr. Crampton. It is a principle of law that a party cannot discredit a witness after producing him in Court. Now it so happens that Mr. Crampton, both by correspondence and associavonched for these witnesses whom he now finds it convenient to discredit, and he appears to have discovered their unreliability only since they testified to his disadvantage. All explanation on this point is avoided. The whole question resolved itself, as has before been suggested, into one of personal application. The British Government has experated itself. But for reasons already stated, and for others not named, Mr. Crampton is not acceptable as a Min-ister here. He could not be of service, under existing circumstances, to the country which he represents, and his continued presence would only augment the disturbing difficulties. In signifying this determination, care will be taken to recipro cate the spirit manifested by Lord Clarendon, to intimate that an acceptable person will be received without hesitation.

It is no secret that Mr. Marcy is now preparing the concluding document, and, as he has brought Lord Clarendon to the stool of repentance, the presumption may be entertained that he will take care the world shall not be kept in ignorance of briefly to the recent outrage on Senator Sumner, and amid frequent bursts of applause, read the following resolutions:

Resoleed, That the ferocious, brutal and cowardly assemit, committed yesterday at Washington by two Members of the House of Representatives, from South Carolina, upon a distinguished Senator from Massachusetts, while sitting in his seat in the Senate Chamber of the United States unarmed and defenselies, because of his able and eloquent speech in definise of Freedom and Free Institutions, demands the stern rebuke of both Houses of Congress, and the prompt and indigoant expulsion of both offenders from the body which they dishoner and distance.

Houses of Congress, and the promise and manuscal expansive both offenders from the body which they dishonor and disprace.

Resolved, That this structous attack upon the freedom of debate in the councils of the nation, is but another and more violent attempt on the part of the Slave Ollianchy to stifle free thought and free speech and to extend and perpetuate the domination of that power, which, if successful, wil prove destructive to Liberty and to all our free institutions, and that it demands, therefore, the indigment reprehension of the American people and the execution of all mankind.

Resolved, That a similar cowardly assault during the present session, by a Member of Congress from Arkansas, upon an unoffending and eminently faithful editor, true to free principles, for discharing his public duties, and exercising his indisenable rights as the proprietor of a free press, and the more recent surgence of a helpless servant, by another Member of Congress, in connection with this new and unparalleled outrage upon the rights of Senators and the severeinty and equality of the States, calls upon the authorities of the City of Washington to whom the administration of criminal justue is entrusted, to visit upon the effenders the first penalties of violated law; and that if the laws are not promptly and faithfully enforced, it may become necessary for the citizens of the United States, loving personal liberty and the immunity of the person of their Representatives from violence, and devoted to Freedom and the Constitution, to consider whether the City of Washington is any longer a highest of the content of the National Congress.

The resolutions were adopted by acclamation, and with six hearty cheers for Senator Sumner.

On motion of Mr. GEORGE W. BLUST, it was reselved that the foregoing resolutions be signed by the officers and all the members of the Convention, and sent to our Senators and Representatives for presentation to the Serate and House of Representatives; and that a copy be sent to the Mayor of Washington. The vote was unanimous, and the Secretary was authorized to sign the names of all the members to the resolutions.

The Convention then adjourned sine die.

The following is the resolve, with respect to the Presidency, unanimously passed by the Republican Convention for the Vth district of Massachusetts, which met in Boston on Tuesday and chose delegates to the Philadelphia Convention:

to the Philadelphia Convention:

Resolved, That the first choice of this Convention for a Presidential candidate, as at present advised, is Col. John C. Fremont; but that we have full confidence in the fidelity of the delegates whom we have elected, and we leave them free to act seconding to their best ndgment, under all the circumstances which may be presented at Philadelphia.

New Dublications.

SOME WRITER has SPOKEN about "PILING OSSA on FELION," which probably means something tremendous, although the idea is not exactly clear to some people. If "Pelion" was the name of a Grecian newspaper with a large circulation, and "Ossa" the name of another Gre-cian newspaper with a large circulation, and if the idea of "piling Ossa on Pelion" simply mears that the two papers being united, the new journal had the largest circulation which it was then possible for human beings to conceive of, we can understand it, for that is just about what BONNER of the LEDGER has been doing. Not that he has united two papers in one. No; he knew a trick worth two of that. When the NEW-YORK LEDGER had reached what was considered the largest kind of circulation, he just went to work and trebled it, and now he has set to work to treble it again. If that isn' "piling up things" rather high, then Chimborare on top of Popocatapeti would be only a very small hill. The LEDGER for THIS MORNING is as full of excellence as anything human can be, and four splendid Engravings over; and yet it costs only

From The North American Review.

"A threefuld interest attaches to this work. It claims emplain into the hapter of our diplomatic history; and it is permanently attractive as an embediment of scientific facts. With such a degree and kind of interest as the badis of a new contribution to the honorable archives of American expletation, we cannot but congrating the legent publication, repared, as it has been, with so eminent care, polyment and skill.

When we consider that the enterprise had mainly in view a diplomatic result, the general reader will be agreedably surprised at the new scientific hasts athered by the intelligent officers, and the amount of fresh information regarding the life and manners, the natural productions, and the industrial processes of the Japanese. The artistic and scientific attractions of the lowest the reader, perhaps, no part of this fresh and suggestive history will prove more curious than the account given of the domestic economy of this singular people—their supple housekeeping, primitive furniture, patiently wrought articles of convenience and luxivy, together with their daily hebits, coetumes, and notions of eliquents. The 'praying marticles of convenience and luxivy, together with their daily hebits, coetumes, and notions of eliquents. The 'praying marticles of convenience and luxivy, together with their daily hebits, coetumes, and notions of eliquents. The 'praying marticles of convenience and luxivy, given of the domestic economy of this singular people—missing imple housekeeping, primitive furniture, patiently wrought articles of convenience and luxury, together with their daily abilits, costumes, and notions of ediquette. The 'praying machines,' sketches of which are inserted from original drawings, form one of the most remarkable satires upon supersitions observances we have encountered in the annals of any nation. And wide sport as at the first glance may appear the political creeds and tendencies of the Japanese, and those of our own times and nation, the reader will find, in the doctrines whereby these blanders so long and riporously excluded foreign interference, the primary and absolute idea of Know-Nothingiam distinctly preclaimed and realized.

"The linearizations are very copious and exact, being derived from sketches, dagaerreotypes, and surveys taken by the artists and officers. A leading characteristic of the work is, that much of it is the result of careful investigation by officers specially detailed to make and report observations.

"An important festure of this work is the Maps of the various ports of Japan, upon which the coundings are noted; these are accommented by saling directions, which to mariners and ounmercial ment are very valuable.

"This work will take its place beside that splendid series of the records of explorations under the auspices of Government, which signally exhibit the scientific and humans enterprise of modern times and furnishes the statesman and the scholar with such rare and reliable data for speculation and history."

D. A. & Co. will also have for sale.

SHIP CARPENTER'S FAMILY.

By WILLIAM E. S. WHITMAN.

This is one of those highly interesting narratives which necessarily takes a strong hold of the popular mind. It tells, in simple, pruth-like terms, of the numerous struggles and disappointments to which the humble mechanic is subjected who has a large family dependent upon his unaided exertions for support. If shows how honest, patient, unwearled industry is sure of success at last in this country, where, perhaps, labor holds a nobler position than it does in any other land. It is a story that will cheer the sinking hearts of the poor, and incline the rich to look more kindly upon the less fortunate in worldly matters. It will be read with equal interest by all classes, and by persons of all ages—and no one will lay the book aside without feeling that he has, morally speaking, been benefitted by its perusal.

"To the religious public it cannot fail to meet with approbation, for it is pervaded with a deep religious centiment. We cope that the book will have a wide circulation, and we see no nope that the book will have a market and the second why it should not, for it conveys an admirable moral, and being colored as it is in such rich tinte of morality, it will at once in the heart and exercise a lasting impression on the charac
